THE ADVENTURES OF ROOSTER AND BANJO

BANJO, PUMPKIN, AND ROOSTER GO ON VACATION, PART 2

The next morning, the children were excited to find that Uncle Flick had gone to a local doughnut shop for goodies to add to the fruit they had for breakfast.

"It's a surprise," was Aunt Nana's only response, no matter how the children asked what they were doing that day. When they drove up at the docks, they all jumped out and hurried up and down the rows, looking at all the interesting boats.

Some were basically fishing boats, similar to the one Daddy had, but a little bigger. When Uncle Tractor pointed to one and told them he had gone shrimping on one like it years earlier with friends, they all wanted to go shrimping.

Some were large, larger than Aunt Nana had expected to find at this harbor. It was fun and exciting, trying to guess who might own such extravagant fun.

Eventually, they came to one particular dock. When they walked up, a lady said, "Group of seven?"

Aunt Nana said, "Yes, that's us," and showed her phone to confirm her purchase.

"All aboard," the lady said. "We'll cast off in about ten minutes."

"Wait... what?" Banjo was astonished. "We're getting on the boat?"

"Nope, not yet," Rooster said. He was excited, too, but he had to tease. "First, we're getting a picture made."

The pictures were snapped, and then they went up the gangplank onto a ship that could hold a hundred or more passengers. "Can we go up top?" Rooster asked.

"We'll be on the ship for about two hours," Aunt Honey said. "I'll take y'all up later, but first, let's go to the front. It will be fun to see where we're going."

As they settled onto benches, an older man at the front of the boat motioned to the kids. "I need you dolphin spotters up here with me," he said, grinning.

"Daw-phins?" Pumpkin started to run, but Aunt Honey's arm wrapped around her waist.

"Let's have fun a bit more safely, darling," Aunt Honey said, releasing her captive and taking her by the hand. The boys had already made their way to join the friendly man, who told them to call him Spotter.

Banjo laughed. "So you're the big boss dolphin spotter, and we're your helpers?"

Spotter liked that. "Exactly, mate!"

As they exited the harbor area, a voice on the intercom began explaining some of the days' excitement. First, they learned about life jackets and other safety concerns. Then they learned that most of the dolphins they would see were born in the Mississippi Sound and would stay there most of their lives, which fascinated the boys.

Soon, they were learning how the ship's captain knew which path to follow leaving and returning to the harbor and what to expect if the weather changed.

All of a sudden, Rooster hollered, "There's one!"

Spotter glanced over and then whooped. "Good job, boy, you found the first dolphin!"

There were plenty of opportunities for Banjo and Pumpkin to spot their share of dolphins. When Pumpkin got tired of being at the front, Aunt Honey brought her to the cabin for a restroom break. Then they all went to the top deck.

It was fun to see the dolphins playing in the water from a different perspective, but the boys wanted to return to their friend Spotter. Uncle Tractor escorted them back down, making sure they were cautious on the ladders.

The children -- and the adults -- were pretty sure two hours had never flown by so quickly.

When they returned to the dock, the pictures were waiting. Uncle Tractor handed one to Aunt Nana, but she said, "Choose one more, please. The children can give it to their parents."

"Good idea," he agreed.

"It seems like all we ever do with these young'uns is feed them," Uncle Flick said. "But I'm getting hungry, too, and Pumpkin just said she's staaaaa-vin."

"What about there?" Aunt Honey asked. She had noticed a small hut that appeared to be doing a booming business. People were walking away carrying hotdogs and hamburgers, so she was willing to give it a try.

As they finished lunch, Pumpkin's head was nodding. "Maybe we should go back to the house and let Rooster and Banjo play in the yard while she rests?" Aunt Nana suggested.

"I could use a clean shirt, too," Uncle Flick said. Pumpkin had dripped ketchup onto his.

"Yes, you could," Aunt Honey agreed. "But then again, you could always use a clean shirt." She was not one to pass up an opportunity to tease her brother.

"Is vacation over with?" Rooster asked as they threw away trash and cleaned up their picnic table.

"No, we're spending another night in the house we rented," Uncle Tractor said. "So rest this afternoon, more adventures this evening, and then we pack up in the morning but there's more fun to be had tomorrow before we have to go home."

"Yay!" Banjo and Rooster hollered together.

Pumpkin mumbled, "Yay," very quietly as Aunt Honey carried her to the vehicle.

The point is this: whoever sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and whoever sows bountifully will also reap bountifully. Each one must give as he has decided in his heart, not reluctantly or under compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound to you, so that having all sufficiency in all things at all times, you may abound in every good work.

As it is written, "He has distributed freely, he has given to the poor; his righteousness endures forever." He who supplies seed to the sower and bread for food will supply and multiply your seed for sowing and increase the harvest of your righteousness. You will be enriched in every way to be generous in every way, which through us will produce thanksgiving to God. For the ministry of this service is not only supplying the needs of the saints but is also overflowing in many thanksgivings to God. By their approval of this service, they will glorify God because of your submission that comes from your confession of the gospel of Christ, and the generosity of your contribution for them and for all others, while they long for you and pray for you, because of the surpassing grace of God upon you. Thanks be to God for his inexpressible gift!

But I say, walk by the Spirit, and you will not gratify the desires of the flesh. For the desires of the flesh are against the Spirit, and the desires of the Spirit are against the flesh, for these are opposed to each other, to keep you from doing the things you want to do. But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law. Now the works of the flesh are evident: sexual immorality, impurity, sensuality, idolatry, sorcery, enmity, strife, jealousy, fits of anger, rivalries, dissensions, divisions, envy, drunkenness, orgies, and things like these. I warn you, as I warned you before, that those who do such things will not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control; against such things there is no law. And those who belong to Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with its passions and desires. If we live by the Spirit, let us also keep in step with the Spirit. Let us not become conceited, provoking one another, envying one another.

Count it all joy, my brothers, when you meet trials of various kinds, for you know that the testing of your faith produces steadfastness. And let steadfastness have its full effect, that you may be perfect and complete, lacking in nothing. If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask God, who gives generously to all without reproach, and it will be given him. But let him ask in faith, with no doubting, for the one who doubts is like a wave of the sea that is driven and tossed by the wind. For that person must not suppose that he will receive anything from the Lord; he is a double-minded man, unstable in all his ways. Let the lowly brother boast in his exaltation, and the rich in his humiliation, because like a flower of the grass he will pass away. For the sun rises with its scorching heat and withers the grass; its flower falls, and its beauty perishes. So also will the rich man fade away in the midst of his pursuits. Blessed is the man who remains steadfast under trial, for when he has stood the test he will receive the crown of life, which God has promised to those who love him.
