THE ADVENTURES OF ROOSTER AND BANJO

BANJO AND ROOSTER RIDE BIKES TO THE STORE

"I want ice cream," Rooster said one hot afternoon.

"That sounds soooo good," Banjo agreed.

Mama heard them. "I don't have ice cream. Sorry. I can put it on my list for the next time I get groceries."

The boys knew Mama had gotten groceries only the day before. It would be FOREVER before she went again.

"I'm going to sit on the porch," Banjo said. "In the shade."

Rooster almost protested. They had come inside mainly for the air conditioner and a snack. But Banjo warned him silently that there was more to sitting on the porch than it might seem.

Outside, Banjo pointed to Aunt Nana, who was unloading groceries from her car. She was too far away for them to see what she had bought, but ice cream was a possibility.

Banjo stuck his head back inside the house. "Mama, Aunt Nana is unloading groceries all by herself. Can we go help?"

"You boys are so sweet to think of that," Mama said, not at all suspicious of their motives. "Sure, run along. Y'all can stay to play if she doesn't mind."

Mama knew the odds of Aunt Nana not having time for the boys were slim. She returned to her housework in a peaceful home. Pumpkin would return from a friend's house in an hour, and the boys would come back eventually, but she could get a lot done without interruptions.

The boys ran up to Aunt Nana just as she reached for the last grocery bag. Rooster said, "I came to help," as he carried it inside and helped her unload it. He remembered where some things went, so he put them up. Banjo found the bag of cold items and starting unloading it. No ice cream.

Rooster went to help. "No ice cream?" he whispered to his brother. "No way!"

Aunt Nana liked ice cream as much as any adult they knew.

"Maybe she already had plenty," Banjo guessed.

Aunt Nana also had pretty good hearing for an older lady. "I'm trying to cut back on ice cream," she said. "But that doesn't mean we have to deprive ourselves completely. Should we make homemade, or should we ride bikes to the store and choose something there?"

"Ride bikes? All the way! Really? That's so cool!" The boys were talking over one another so fast, Aunt Nana wasn't sure who said what, but she was pretty sure they had made their choice of the two options.

"I'll text your Mama for permission, and then we can finish putting away groceries while we wait to see what she thinks," Aunt Nana said.

Banjo made a face, but he didn't protest. "I thought y'all came to help," Aunt Nana said, pretending to not know they had ulterior motives.

"Oh, we did," Banjo said, quickly placing canned goods onto their rack in the pantry. "But we were hoping you bought ice cream, too."

Aunt Nana laughed. "I always hope someone bought ice cream, darling boy. Don't be ashamed."

They placed each item where it belonged. As soon as the last bag was empty and everything was in place, Aunt Nana's phone dinged. Mama had texted, "I trust you, but are you sure? The boys haven't ridden on the road much."

"They'll be fine," Aunt Nana texted back. "I've been working with them on our road, where there isn't much traffic. I think they're ready."

Aunt Nana made sure she had money in her pocket, and then she rolled out her recumbent bicycle. Rooster said, "Is that the wreck-bent bike?"

Aunt Nana laughed. "It's a recumbent, which means lying down or leaning back. You see how comfortable I am compared to your seat."

"Do they make those for kids?" Banjo asked.

"I don't really know. I have seen them with two seats, so that a strong rider can give a friend who has a disability a ride. That's pretty cool," Aunt Nana said. She reminded them of road rules, made sure their helmets were on tight, and they were off.

At the store, Aunt Nana pointed out the ice cream freezer. "I want this one," Rooster said, holding up a pint.

"That's a bit much for one little boy," Aunt Nana said. "And we don't have a metal spoon." She helped them look at the options. They each ended up choosing candy bar ice cream. Aunt Nana added a half-gallon of vanilla to the pile on the counter and paid for all of it.

"Are you going to eat all of that?" Banjo asked, pointing to the half-gallon the lady was bagging up. "And the ice cream Snickers you got?"

"I have a thermal in my bike bag," Aunt Nana explained. "I thought we could take this to your house so the rest of the family can have a treat when they want it."

"That's a good idea," Rooster approved. "Pumpkin might be home by now, and she would be sad if she missed ice cream!"

They all sat down outside and ate their ice cream after Aunt Nana stored the half-gallon in her bike bag. "The only thing bad about eating ice cream..." Banjo said.

"...Is knowing this is the last bite." Rooster finished the sentence as he gulped down the last of his M&M ice cream.

"That was so good."

"I really didn't need the carbs," Aunt Nana said. "I may need to take a longer ride just to burn some of that sugar."

The boys decided they should take the ice cream home to the freezer, and then they could make another loop from their house to the store and back, just to help Aunt Nana's carb situation. Not that they had any idea what carbohydrates are.

Aunt Nana just smiled. The boys needed more practice on road safety, and there were very few cars on the road today. Perfect.

Praise the LORD! Praise, O servants of the LORD, praise the name of the LORD! Blessed be the name of the LORD from this time forth and forevermore! From the rising of the sun to its setting, the name of the LORD is to be praised! The LORD is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens! Who is like the LORD our God, who is seated on high, who looks far down on the heavens and the earth? He raises the poor from the dust and lifts the needy from the ash heap, to make them sit with princes, with the princes of his people. He gives the barren woman a home, making her the joyous mother of children. Praise the LORD!

Psalms 113:1-9
