THE ADVENTURES OF ROOSTER AND BANJO

BANJO AND ROOSTER PREVENT A DISASTER

“Aunt Nana! Aunt Nana!” Banjo hollered, too excited to tell her what he saw.

“Just tell me what the problem is,” Aunt Nana said calmly.

“The train!” Rooster screeched. “There’s a train!”

“Ok, we can park and watch it go by,” Aunt Nana said. “No problem. It won’t hurt to stop driving in this storm.”

“No!” Banjo insisted. “Look!”

Aunt Nana parked her vehicle on the play mat the boys were using to act out their latest version of themselves as rescue heroes. A tree was leaning over the train track.

“If it falls any further...” she said, pulling out the pretend phone the boys had given her “in case of emergencies.” Pretending to need advice, she asked, “What should I do?”

“Call nine-one-one,” Rooster suggested. “That’s what everyone always does in an emergency, right?”

While Aunt Nana was on the phone, the tree fell across the tracks. Which meant, Rooster had stopped holding the toy tree in place and had allowed it to fall.

Aunt Nana gave the update to the imaginary dispatcher, and then told the boys the train crew and local first responders had been contacted.

Luckily, the train was still a long way off, barely visible through the pouring rain. Banjo had been plundering in the closet when he discovered an old fog machine from some long ago party. He was creating an amazing weather disaster covering most of the playroom.

Rooster drove tiny fire engines to the tracks. The boys had helped Aunt Nana personalize them with vinyl stickers, so there was one from the Wiggins Fire Department and one from Big Level. Lights were flashing enough to trigger a migraine, but Aunt Nana was pleased that the sirens weren’t working.

“That will stop the train!” Rooster said as he parked.

“That’s not all!” Banjo said as he hurriedly added firefighters to the scene. “Look! You may have thought firefighters just fight fires. They’ve got chainsaws!”

“And they’re acting like loggers!” Rooster agreed. “And look, there’s other people that don’t wear uniforms, helping them. Are they volunteers, Aunt Nana?”

“Maybe so,” Aunt Nana said, looking at the array of toy figures the boys were adding to the rescue work. “Some could have been passing by and stopped to help. Others could be volunteer firefighters who heard the call on their radios, so they stopped what they were doing to respond.”

“That’s so cool,” Rooster said. “How old do you have to be to volunteer, Aunt Nana? I can’t wait ‘til I get to be one.”

“You can talk to Uncle Flick about it,” Aunt Nana said as she watched Rooster add a truck to the scene. It had been emblazoned with “Uncle Flick’s Rescue Vehicle,” even though it looked a lot like his personal truck.

“Uncle Flick is helping clear the track,” Banjo said as he moved the man with the chainsaw aside. He pushed other helpers closer and rolled the log off the tracks.

Rooster was keeping an eye on the train. He managed to get it to stop by Aunt Nana’s car just as the log rolled off.

“Why didn’t they keep going?” Banjo asked. “The track is clear now.”

“I’m not sure,” Aunt Nana said, thinking they could just ask Rooster what the plan was, but going along with the game. “I’m glad they didn’t go roaring through with people standing so near the tracks helping clear the way.”

Banjo moved his Uncle Flick character over to Aunt Nana’s car. “Hey, Mom,” Banjo said, pretending to be Uncle Flick. “You stopped to watch?”

“No, I stopped to call nine-one-one,” she said, trying not to giggle at her nephew’s attempt to fake a man’s voice. “But the boys saved the train. They saw the tree falling and told me.”

“That’s pretty cool, boys,” Rooster said, taking over for Banjo in pretending to be Uncle Flick. “You know, there’s this saying. See something; say something. It means, if you see something that ain’t right, figure out a way to tell somebody. You boys got help here. Problem solved.”

Aunt Nana snickered. Her son had recently been teaching the boys how to help in case of emergencies. Maybe they had listened better than he had thought.

“The boys want to know why the train stopped,” Aunt Nana said.

Rooster’s eyebrows shot up. He hadn’t expected that question. He shoved the “Uncle Flick” character back into Banjo’s hand. Banjo said, “Uh, ummmm, well, Mom, they, uh, they’re making sure there’s no damage to the tracks.”

“Good save,” Rooster whispered to his brother. “I couldn’t think of nothing.”

Banjo puffed out his chest and deepened his voice to add, “I think the train engineer is coming this way to congratulate these heroic boys for rescuing his train.”

Rooster hurriedly grabbed an official-looking character from the stack of toys. “You, sirs, have just done a very heroic deed,” he declared dramatically, waving the little character around. “You have saved my train. You have saved lives. This day will go down in the history of—”

“Don’t spoil it by sounding like a poly-tish-ner, Rooster,” Banjo declared.

Rooster giggled and finished, “The history of really cool kids doing really cool stuff.”

Now if anyone builds on the foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, straw— each one's work will become manifest, for the Day will disclose it, because it will be revealed by fire, and the fire will test what sort of work each one has done. If the work that anyone has built on the foundation survives, he will receive a reward. If anyone's work is burned up, he will suffer loss, though he himself will be saved, but only as through fire. Do you not know that you are God's temple and that God's Spirit dwells in you? If anyone destroys God's temple, God will destroy him. For God's temple is holy, and you are that temple. Let no one deceive himself. If anyone among you thinks that he is wise in this age, let him become a fool that he may become wise. For the wisdom of this world is folly with God. For it is written, "He catches the wise in their craftiness," and again, "The Lord knows the thoughts of the wise, that they are futile."

This is how one should regard us, as servants of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God. Moreover, it is required of stewards that they be found faithful. But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged by you or by any human court. In fact, I do not even judge myself. For I am not aware of anything against myself, but I am not thereby acquitted. It is the Lord who judges me. Therefore do not pronounce judgment before the time, before the Lord comes, who will bring to light the things now hidden in darkness and will disclose the purposes of the heart. Then each one will receive his commendation from God. I have applied all these things to myself and Apollos for your benefit, brothers, that you may learn by us not to go beyond what is written, that none of you may be puffed up in favor of one against another. For who sees anything different in you? What do you have that you did not receive? If then you received it, why do you boast as if you did not receive it?

1 Corinthians 4:1-7
